Our new course for Group Supervisors consists of a residential teaching week and 5 follow up online modules (Afternoon/evening sessions to suit the group) It will cover extensive learning about the theory of group work alongside supported practice. It will also include extensive practice in a local setting and background reading.

Participants must be experienced supervisors under the Methodist Policy and able to commit to this kind of work for 3 years post-course.

Each participant will need to build a group of supervisees to practice with and accompany locally and then reflect on their learning amongst their peers. They will need to be committed to the group they are working with for at least 2 years.

Progress will be assessed through a “viva style” consultation

This work will be led by 3 Diploma Qualified group supervision practitioners who bring their skills and expertise to the course in the form of teaching, support and assessment.

A full role outline and more information about how to get involved can be obtained from Jane Bingham
